

Designing challenge into your curriculum for all your learners

www.curee.co.uk

What Works Well?

Surveys over 7,000 pupils from 2007-2010 showed that 20% students felt persistently under challenged. Teacher feedback suggested that they were wary of putting too much pressure on their learners.

Participating in this workshop will help you get to grips with recent international evidence about securing appropriate levels of challenge for the whole range of pupil ability. These key strategies will be explored and refined for your own context.

The workshop will:

- enable you to develop your understanding of effective strategies for building appropriate levels of challenge for all pupils into planning and teaching.

The workshop is designed for:

- Heads, deputies, assistant heads, department heads and subject leaders with an interest in ways of designing challenge into the curriculum; and
- Primary and secondary practitioners.

You will:

- grasp important new evidence about planning and teaching for challenge;
- find out the main issues teachers report about the difficulties of planning for challenge and the support they would like;
- explore with colleagues 4 key practical strategies which can be used to develop challenge in your school; and
- understand the 4 key benefits of developing a more challenging curriculum

Be confident of quality:

- Your workshop facilitator will be Philippa Cordingley, CUREE's Chief Executive who led the 3 year research project for QCDA and has extensive experience of facilitating CPD for school leaders and for teachers.
- All CUREE programmes are rooted in the evidence about what really works in classrooms and how teachers learn.
- We will use interactive activities and powerful tools to encourage deep learning.
- You will leave equipped to share your learning with colleagues in school.
